COMMUNICATIONS DIRECTOR
AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION FUND OF MICHIGAN

Position Overview

The Communications Director (CD) is a member of the ACLU of Michigan’s leadership team and plays a key role in executing the organization's strategic priorities. The CD develops and implements communications and marketing efforts to enhance the impact of our work, reach new and diverse audiences, engage our members and financial supporters, and attract high quality media coverage of the ACLU of Michigan’s work. The CD should be able to conceptualize strategies and outcomes over the long term while implementing that work in a fast-paced and often high-pressure environment.

The CD contributes to a collaborative work culture to ensure the excellence of all external communications materials and with our organizational partners and National ACLU staff in the communications, legal and policy departments. The CD directly supervises a digital media strategist, investigative reporter and occasional consultants and reports to the Executive Director.

Specific Responsibilities

1. Strategy and Goals

   a. Conceive a broad vision for using communications strategies to further the goals of the ACLU of Michigan, and develop plans to execute that vision and measure progress.

   b. Determine appropriate communications channels and tactics to disseminate ACLU news, promote specific advocacy campaigns, publicize events and broaden and engage diverse audiences.

   c. Spearhead multi-media public education campaigns to uplift legal, policy and field-led issue campaigns related to the organization’s strategic goals.

   d. Facilitate “one voice” and good use of the ACLU brand by working effectively across departments and with ACLU lay leaders to ensure volunteer work and programs complement state and national priorities.

2. Media Relations, Marketing and Branding

   a. Manage and coordinate all aspects of media relations, including press releases, conferences and advisories, earned media, media requests, talking points, messaging guidance and op-eds, organizational statements, and interviews with ACLU spokespersons. Monitor the media and take advantage of opportunities to engage.
b. Manage speaking requests to ensure effective use of staff time, coordination, high impact, and high quality messaging by all those speaking on behalf of the organization;

c. Manage development, production and distribution of all external materials prepared by staff, experts or consultants.

d. Support development staff activities that require marketing expertise and the production of supporting materials for messaging and events.

e. Help lead and support efforts across departments to thoughtfully engage the many thousands of new ACLU members to increase rates of retention.

f. Support the Executive Director as a key organizational spokesperson by arranging media interviews, providing background material as needed, and drafting op-eds and statements. Ensure that other members of the leadership team are thoughtfully deployed and well-prepared for media interviews and speaking engagements.

3. New Media Innovation

a. Manage online presence and digital storytelling platforms that result in measureable action. Explore innovative methods for presenting the ACLU of Michigan’s work digitally.

b. Manage online organizing, email marketing and action alert platforms to ensure effective engagement of ACLU members and supporters.

c. Manage digital storytelling best practices and supervise the production of shareable images, infographics and videos.

4. Leadership

a. Manage, motivate and mentor a team of communications professionals in an environment that supports professional growth, results, and accountability and ensures that the communications infrastructure is well-run, efficient and organized.

b. Collaborate with the leadership team to help shape organizational direction and ensure that priority issues and campaigns have a strong communications infrastructure.

c. Contribute to the financial sustainability of ACLU operations by providing support as requested by development staff and the Executive Director.

d. Contribute to a highly communicative internal culture that ensures all staff are well-informed of relevant media-related work.
e. Contribute to the annual budgeting process, ensuring that needed resources are identified and secured, acting as a strong fiduciary of non-profit dollars, and being accountable for project expenses.

4. Other tasks as assigned by the Executive Director.

Qualifications
